

After a customer chooses a time slot, any unavailable items are removed from the shopping cart. This may result in the estimated total falling below the minimum required amount for the chosen timeslot.

In the example flow below, a Chef's Table customer meets the minimum order amount for a premium time slot. However, some products in the cart are unavailable for delivery by that time, and are automatically removed. This causes the order amount to drop below the minimum order amount for the preselected premium time slot.
